

Roadmap to Bisexual Inclusion

Easy Read Version

Summary:

The Roadmap to Bisexual Inclusion is divided in six sections. Each section has some text inside the road and its own sign. When read in order, the sections are:

- Meadow of Bi Inclusive Language (text inside the road: "Inclusion is looking for the right words...")

- Forest of Assumptions (text inside the road: "...letting go of our assumptions...")

- Bridge of Knowledge (text inside the road: "...bridging the gaps in our understanding...")

- Chasm of Bi Needs (text inside the road: "...collecting the right information for the right purpose...")

- Mountain Range of Discrimination (text inside the road: "...dealing with multiple sources of discrimination...")

- Crashing Waves of Biphobia, Fog of Invisibility and Lighthouse of Visibility (text inside the road: "...and celebrating our diverse identities.")

The text on the road reads together as: "Inclusion is looking for the right words, letting go of our assumptions, bridging the gaps in our understanding, collecting the right information for the right purpose, dealing with multiple sources of discrimination and celebrating our diverse identities."

Detailed description:

The road leads up featuring the text “Inclusion is looking for the right words...”, surrounded by blue, pink and purple flowers with the sign “Meadow of Bi Inclusive Language” above.

The road then curves right and down featuring the text “...letting go of our assumptions...” as it goes through a dense purple pine forest. The sign for this section is “Forest of Assumptions”. There are three people sitting on a blue blanket (two are pink, one is purple). There is also a little person sitting on a fence.

The road continues down and along the bottom of the page and over a waterfall with the text “...bridging the gaps in our understanding...”. The river flows from the forest of assumptions to this waterfall where the bridge over it is labelled “Bridge of Knowledge”.

The road then turns up and over a large crack in the landscape labelled “Chasm of Bi Needs”. The text on the road for this part reads “...collecting the right information for the right purpose...”.

The bottom right hand corner of the page has a sign held up by a dragon. The sign reads “Here be Dragons”.

The next section of the road, heading up to the top of the page reads “...dealing with multiple sources of discrimination...” which leads through some purple peaked mountains, signposted as “Mountain Range of Discrimination”.

The final section of the road heads past a foggy patch to the right labelled “Fog of Invisibility”. On the left side is a pink “Lighthouse of Visibility” perched on purple rocks battered by “Crashing Waves of Biphobia”. A sea monster swims towards it from the left side.

On this final section the text reads “...and celebrating our diverse identities.” The destination is a small house hoisting the bi and trans flags. The house is surrounded by pink and blue trees and bushes, with two happy people to celebrate the end of your journey.
